This course was very interesting, especially for us the international students who never had any kind of business simulation before. I think it is very important to learn business strategies to apply them in the future. The dynamic was very good, but I feel a little more time will have been better; even though we learned as well to deal with fast timing and unpredictable events. Other thing I feel was very remarkable was the responsibility and the workers' priority, Mexico as well as other countries are more capitalist than France, so learning how to deal and give the proper facilities and concern to the workers was fascinating, I really liked working in the Human Resources division. I believe the only negative thing about this course was the language, because I'm not a native French speaker it was hard to understand everything.

In my opinion the course was very well organized. We could train both strategy of the company (financial, HR, communication) as well as being responsible for our workers. Stimulation of that kind is always good because it encourages people to think analytically, perspective and creatively. I wish I could enjoy the course more if it was in English only but nevertheless I spent great time in class. Maybe if there were less teams the whole simulation would go smoother and quicker.

Unfortunately, I thought the course was in English, so that made the course more difficult, because I don't speak French; however, we were placed with very intelligent and motivated French students who speak English, so that made the communication barrier a lot easier. When I first heard the title Responsible Business Game, I just understood it as a regular business class. I am from the United States, and I have taken a couple business courses before hand, but all from a capitalist point of view, with Darwin's theory in mind "Survival of the Fittest". It was so interesting that one of the main objectives was the employees, of course they are important in the US, but they didn't play such a big factor. Before I came to France rarely had I seen any strikes, and in France it is implemented in the way of life, so therefore it would also be implemented in the business and I really enjoyed a different point of view, a different way of life. I felt that the organization of the course was great. I enjoyed receiving a task and having to fix the situation in a matter of hours or minutes. I feel that if I was suddenly placed in charge of a top fortune 500 company, then this is exactly what would happen. A business is constantly being affected by the situations around it, and it is the CEO and the headquarters duty to predict the best possible solution, and I feel that is what this course helped us accomplish. Thank you so much.

Excellente expérience. I want more! On apprend à se connaître, à voir où on est le plus compétent au sein d'une équipe aux talents variés.

La simulation est très dynamique.

La prochaine fois il y aura des comptes bancaires et des humains derrière les chiffres, alors s'il vous plaît, donnez-nous plus souvent l'opportunité de se faire la main sur ce type d'exercice.

Excellente expérience. Ce séminaire m'a permis de mettre en pratique des savoirs jusqu'alors segmentés au sein de l'enseignement de l'IEP. Les mises en situation et la trame générale laissent des opportunités d'être créatif tout en récompensant le travail de fond. Enfin, sur un plan de construction de carrière, le travail intensif, diversifié et en groupe m'a permis de me rendre compte de mes qualités et faiblesses dans tel et tel domaine.
